EYE-CATCHERS

Windsor Smith

FOR ARTERIORS
Necessity is the mother of invention. Or, in Windsor Smith's case, Burning Man was the mother of invention. Smith's latest collection for Arteriors takes inspiration from the Nevada desert, which informed her palette of sunset hues and glistening metals. Offerings include the "Aja" wall sconce in an antique-brass finish. It's the perfect perch for artwork, a poem, or even a cookbook. (arteriorshome.com)

Michael S. Smith

In a new collection for Hartmann & Forbes, design master Michael S. Smith writes a love letter to ancient weaving techniques with artisanal window coverings and wallcoverings handcrafted in Southeast Asia. (hartmannforbes.com)

Aphrochie

Husband-and-wife team Bryan Mason and Jeanine Hays of Aphrochie collaborated with Chasing Paper and illustrator Kim Johnson to develop a soulful wallpaper collection inspired by African-American dance. The "Alley" in green and "Dunham" in blue are named for prominent choreographers and activists in African-American dance culture, Alvin Alley and Katherine Dunham. "Among the lush blooms, you see outlines of dancers emerging," Hays says. (aphrochie.com)

Sarah Lavoine

French designer Sarah Lavoine, a household name in Europe thanks to rooms that embody the cosmopolitan Parisian spirit, brings her look across the ocean in her first American launch. Inspired by her Polish heritage and the elegant, refined curves seen in Slavic architecture, Lavoine has created cushions and puffs that emerge rooms with their bold expressions of color, scale, and pattern. Harbinger/Fromental

A little Los Angeles sunshine—and British luxury—has made its way to the sixth floor of the iconic New York Design Center. Beloved L.A. showroom Harbinger and its proprietor, Joe Lucas of Lucas Studio, are the newest names in the building, along with London-based wallpaper icon Fromental. The showroom also will serve as the North American flagship for Hector Finch Lighting. (harbignery.com)
