“In the depths
of winter,
I finally learned that there was in me an invincible
summer.”

ALBERT CAMUS

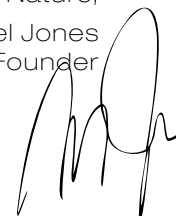

There is a kind of summer that does not leave with the season. It lives in the warmth of a striped awning, the snap of color against a quiet wall, the memory of an afternoon that ran long into evening.

This season, our designs draw from that summer. Where some find sanctuary in quiet and shadow, others find it in color, in pattern, in the warmth of an interior that holds the joy of the season. Both are forms of restoration. Both belong to the home.

At Hartmann&Forbes, sanctuary is not one thing. It is the room that meets you where you are. Our work is to weave the natural world into that room, in fibers and palettes that carry feeling without forcing it.

May this season invite you to linger. To carry summer with you into the rooms that were built to keep it.

A STUDY IN COLOR,
MATERIAL AND LIGHT

the COLOURWEAVE COLLECTION
Color, expressed through natural material.

This season, handwoven bamboo takes on the cadence of Stripe, while slender Araucaria wood forms
the architectural lines of Plank.

Two expressions of Colourweave.
Each made for the window.

STRIPE + PLANK

New creations that explore sanctuary through color, pattern, and the warmth of a season held a little longer.

While sanctuary can be found in quiet textures, soft fibers, and earthen tones, here it takes a more expressive form, bringing the joy of color and pattern into the interior.
